

Healing the Land
Building Community

February 14, 2012

To fellow stewardship organizations,

I highly recommend ContourLogic and Scott Gordon for assistance with planning, design and education for trail components of stewardship efforts.

Wildlands Restoration Volunteers is a non-profit organization that engages thousands of volunteers every year in public land stewardship activities around Colorado, including ecological restoration and trail projects.

For three years in a row, ContourLogic has designed trail reroutes and trained volunteers for our large projects with the U.S. Forest Service. For our 2011 effort, Scott developed corridor alternatives, garnered land manager approval, solicited input from stakeholders and partner organizations, designed the final alignment, crafted detailed field notes, trained volunteers, and helped our staff source and coordinate hybrid professional-volunteer construction.

Beyond acting in a forthright and professional manner, Scott has demonstrated sensitivity to our non-profit budget and commitment to our additional goals of inclusiveness and community around trails and public lands. We will commission ContourLogic for another project this year and look forward to continuing our professional relationship into the future.

Please contact me to discuss ContourLogic's qualifications and how they may help achieve your organization's trail goals.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink that reads "Ed Self".

Ed Self
Executive Director,
Wildlands Restoration Volunteers
303-543-1411

www.wlr.org

3012 Sterling Circle
Suite 201
Boulder, CO 80301
303-543-1411

info@wlr.org